Bombay High Court achieves storage of Organizational Codes for Institutional Litigants.

In the Case Information System (CIS) used by Bombay High Court and its District Courts, information relating to all institutional litigants, country-wide, viz., Government Departments, Constitutional bodies, Commissions, Institutions, Banks, Universities, Educational Institutions etc. has now been added to the database.

The Bombay High Court is the first, and so far the only, High Court to have achieved this.

This data is a major step towards automating electronic services in the judicial process.

The codified information includes data of the State Government, the Central Government, the corporations of both, government companies, public sector banks, insurance companies, cooperative sugar factories, cooperative cotton mills, agricultural produce market committees, urban local bodies, rural local bodies, national, scheduled, non-scheduled, cooperative banks, universities, colleges, all police stations in Maharashtra, all prisons in India, private and public limited companies, and more.

Achieving this was a mammoth task. It involved collecting basic information about roughly 40,500 entities. This was then matched to census-based demographic data (addresses, email id, phone and mobile numbers, names of the representatives, etc).

The immediate advantages are many. For instance, any new filing in Maharashtra can automatically fire an alert to the entity concerned anywhere in the country. Once a respondent or opposing entity is known, the nearest court — anywhere in the country — can be located, with the associated bailiff. Then service can be rapidly effected in digital form by transmitting the notice or warrant and accompanying filing in soft copy to the court nearest the defendant or respondent entity, with a request to effect service directly there.

Statistical data collection can now be collected in a manner never possible before (e.g., the number of cases by or against insurance companies, the period of pendency, and so forth). This facilitates granular policy decisions to isolate classes of cases for quicker disposal.

The entire codification with the names of the organizations is appended to this circular.
